In action, if you could aspertain for cortain where most bullots lwers flying, you could be pretty safe in | venturing your last dollar that Bullar would be in the midst of it. As leader of the Frontier Light Horse, Buller, who had been bred to the profes sion of arms as an infantryman, eleveloped a kind of Cromwellian gonius as for the mounted arm, and for the commanding of mon. Leading his men at a swinging canter, wrote the historian of the campaign, with his reins in his teeth, a revolver in one hand and a knobkerrie which he had snatched from a Zulu in the other his hat blown off in the melde, and a large apliator of rock from above, this gallant horseman seemed a demon incurrente to the flying savages who slunk out of his path as if he had been—as they believed him to be -an evil spirit, whose very look was death. HOW HE WON THE V.C.

It was no wonder that his mon loved their fierce, silout captain, though he ruled them with an iron rod. In one hand he held and iron roll to enforce the discipline of his men, and in another a shield wherewith to screen them from death, Thus at the action of the Inhlohane Mountain he was instrumontal in saving the lives of two of his officers, and one of his men, at the imminont peril of his own. Buller had brilliantly performed the task appointed him by his chief, Evelyn Wood, which was to reconnoitre the capulatin, when his force was compelled to retreat, in something like panic-stricken disorder, before the sudden appearance of overwitching masses of the savage enemy. Buller himself was almost nate enough to receive his baptism of fire the only man whose cool courage did not at the taking of the Taku forts—a campaign desert him on his way down the boulderfrom which he returned home with a meda strown and debris chromhered hill-side. and two clasps. But it was not till ten your Presently he came upon Captain D'Arcy, later that he had another opportunity of whose borse had been shot under him, and showing the stuff of which he was made, and who was retiring on foot. AN UNRAVELLER OF HOPELESS TANGLES. The Duke of Wellington used to say that, even if he got into a tight place, he could always rely upon his troops-whom he otherwise rewarded by abusing as 'the' soum of the earth, -to pull him out of it seem of the earth,—to pull film out of its again. But it has over just been all the other way about with Redvers Buller. To the part of Deus ex machina, the duty of unravelling hopeless tangles, of setting the New Company on or before the 15th NEW YORK.—The Chinese Evangelist things which had gone desporately wrong, and of saving the day. In this re-light than over This was the Nile campaign of 1885, in which he served as Chief of the Staff to his ever trustful and appreciative chief, Lord Wolsoley. Stewart's column had made its blood-stained march across the Bayuda desort from Korti to Moteameh only toencounter what may be called victorious disaster, to find that Khartpum had fallen, and to be threatened with annihilation on itar sturn. It had lost its original leader, but it was soon to be furnished with another. With only a few companies of the Royal Irish-the same gallant regiment as had helped him to save the day at Tamai Puller hurried across the desert to Gubat, took command of the threatened force, and in the most musterly manner led it back in safety to Korti-sick and wounded included-fending off he attacks and balling the hostile designs of the vengeful Dervishes. Note more skilfully did. Xenophon con-duct the retreat of his mortal ten thousand. Docks have buyers at $19. from the Euphrates to the sea than Redvers when prompted by motives of strategical prudence instead of panic fear, is one of the tions. most difficult and dangerous, and most hono rable op rations in war, and can only be undertaken by a muster of his art. Once when someone, in the bouring of Moltke, was comparing him to Alexander, and Clesar, Marlhorough and Napoleon, 'No. sud the great strategist deprecatingly, 'I have no right to rank with any of these great commandors, for I have never in all my life commanded a retreat.' But Buller's next operation in war will not be a retreat-of that we may be quite sure. Since the Nile compaign of unhappy memory. Sir Redvers Baller has seen no service in the field-unless parliaps to his category of daty we assign his appointment, in 1886, as Special Commissioner to deal with the Feminis, moonlighters and other outragemongers in Cork and Kerry, which was followed by his temporary nomination as Under Secretary for Ireland. But a soldier of the brainy type of Buller can prove just as useful to his country in the bereau as on the battlefield; and of office and administrative work in the course of his career he has had experience both ample and varied. Both in Scotland and at Aldershot, in the intervals of his campaigns. he did Quartermaster duty, and after the Nile-expedition he became the head of his department in Pall Mall, where he left his mark, as everywhere else, by re-corganising the commissariat and transport of the army; while, when he succeeded Lord Wolsoley as Adjutant-General, on the latter's promotion to the post of Commander in Chief he devoted himself to the writing of the 'Infantty Drill Book,' which has the reputation of being the very best thing of the kind that was ever penned.

It is said that when the Duke of Cambridge retired from the Horse Guards in 1895, it was the intention of Sir Campbell Bannerman to appoint General Buller in his stead, and that it was only the sudden collapse of the Liberal Cabinet that obviated an act which, despite Buller's morits, would have been a grave injustice to Lord Wolse-Be that as it may, it was fortunate that Buller, instead of roplacing the Duko of Cambridge at the Horse Guards, was reserved to succeed the Duke of Connaught at army in the field; and it would have been a positive misfortune for the nation-had Geneial Buller not been free to direct the operations of our forces in South Africa a man still in the prime of vigour despite his sixty years, of tried valour and experience, and with a service record in brilliancy second to none of the famous paladins of the Empress-

PANIC ON THE SHANGHAL RICE

MARKET. SHANGHAI, Nov. 18. There is a general panic in the local rice market, which, if unabated, cannot fail to exercise a very depressing effect upon trade High Extertioner, Kang-yi, to mandarins in levy the most oppressive taxes upon the populace in these provinces under cover of aiding the needs of the Peking Treasury by increasing the points of taxa-tion. In consequence of Kang-yi's representation several new stations for the collection of lekin upon rice have been established in the province of Kangsu, till now there are no less than four lekin stations between Shanghai and Wusieb, at each of which a levy of 50 cash per picul is made. As a consequence moreover, the time of the boats coming to Shanghai has been increased from three to six days, because of the delays entailed at each station by the officials collecting the lekin till at the present time their are fully six hundred rice boats waiting to get through at the barrier of Chang-sub. The day before yesterday the rice merchants waited upon the Shanghai Taotai to beg him to take steps to have the new taxes remitted, but without effect, the Taotal replying that the extra lekin was Wednesday, where she got a tog and was imposed by Imperial decree and he could not interfere. The price of rice before these now regulations was $5.60 per seh of 150 entries, but owing to the extra lekin and the increased cost of transit by reason of the extra delays at the Customs stations, thedealers cannot sell at anything like this figure, which is already a terribly high one now protty well that only a small fraction Stores and Chemists for Rowland's Macassan of these collections reach the Imperial Gov. SHANGHAI, Nov. 18. The lumber-laden British barque Nanatmo. Copt. Roberts, arrived here on Thursday under jury-rig having lost her spara in a typhoon some five hundred miles southeast of Japan. The vessel, which has made a tedious and perilous voyage of a hundred and one days across the Pacific. left Chemainus, British Columbia, on the 7th of August for Tungku and until the 6th of October land most favourable weather. A couple of days previous to TERMS MODERATE. this latter date the barometer began to fall and the sea became turbulent indicating a disturbance in the vicinity. Capt. Roberts at once shortened sail and prepared for the approaching typhoon On the 6th the wind freshened from the N.E. and worked easterly with increasing force until he found it imperative to put her under bare poles. The vessel. being on the right-hand somi circle of the typhoon, was how to on the starboard tack. By midnight the wind was blowing with terrific force from the S. and a mountainous sea had risen which practically engulfed the barque; h wever, beyond the washing away of some of the deckload, and the flooding of the crew's quarters and the cabin aft, it did little damage. At 2 a.m., the wind, which was then 3.S.W. with the barometer at 28.44, was at hurricane force, and with the violent urching the iron foremast carried away some five feet above the deck through the parting of the weather rigging, currying with it the jibboom and the main and mizzen topmasts. With the greatest difficulty were the officers, assisted by the crew, able to cut away the les rigging and free the vessel from the additional danger of towng wreckage. The foremast, fortunately. Aldershot, scoing that it is against military by its weight cleared itself, although in doing so it tore the bolts in the chain plates Chief himself to take the command of an clean out of the vessel's side causing thereby a heavy leakage. That day the wind veered to the west and quickly fell to a calm with fine weather. The vessel, which now could not spread a single sail, tumbled terribly in the heavy rollers. The crew set to to get the water out of the hold which had risen to nine feet, but before doing this fully forty thousand feet of dock lumber had to be jettisoned in order to get the leaks above water to be plugged -this occupied two days. The next thing was to get some canvas on the ship, so a stout log was chosen as a foremast, and by a tackle from the mainmast head and the heel of the log, which was well guyed, placed over the hollow iron stump the spar was slipped into place and quickly wedged and stayed. The main upper-topsail yard having been saved was requisitioned as a fore yard. The parrel of all kinds. It arises from the extra op-portunities given by the visit of the Lord and the yard steadied. To make matters worse the carpenter died of heart disease on the 9th when his services were most in demand and this added considerably to the labours of the officers. Throughout the operations the crew, which were composed of Malays and Manila men, worked well and in a few days the vessel was heading for the Locchess under two jibs, foresul and mainsail, and main and mizen staysails. When everything was properly secure the Captain turned his attention to extra canvas and a couple of royal yards were run up to the mastheads, and foreand aft canvas spread wherever a stay could be set up. On making the Loochoos, steering south of Kakeroma, a northerly course was set and utilising the Japan Stream fair progress was made although the vessel's speed ranged only from one to three and a half knots. Lat. 32° N. being reached a westerly course was set, and, the wind still favouring, the vessel was able to anchor twelve miles north of Gutzlaff on

His Excellency and party having occupied The Chairman said-Your Excellency, Ldies and gentlemen, you have kindly condescended to be present here to-day to assist at a function which, it is hoped, will mark a distinct enoch in the history of the Tung Wa Hospital. The laying of the foundation stone of the proposed new building to meet the fast growing needs, of the hospital on the other side of the road marks an event of no insignificant importance to those for whom the Ting Wa Hospital was primarily founded. With the completion of the building on this site will be seen the adoption of the plan so folicitously suggested by Your Excellency for the better 'accommodation of women patients' since it is proposed to embiaco within its wall war Je for the frentident of midwifery cases and an operating room for the more genera handling of surgical cases. Lost, I should relegate to a later moment the expression of great indobtedness in which the Directors of the Hospital have been placed by the very liberal response accorded to their appeal for the funds of this institution, per mit me now, first of all, to publicly thank Your Excellency for that hearty desire to assist' which was no sooner promised than fulfilled. For it is due to Your Excellency that the Chinese Community have obtained this valuable site free of cost from Government. Nor are they less grateful to you for opening the subscription list with your generous donation. An example so conspicuously set was sure to be fruitful of good results. In this the Directors have cause for much gratification. The community, segardless of race or creed, came forward with their contributions with a liberality truly remarkable, and within 3 months no less an amount than $80,000 has been sulfscribed.
